What continents and oceans are shown? little use for eyes, and some that have been brought to the surface have none. The mud which covers the bottom is in many places made up of the shells of tiny animals, many of them even smaller than a pinhead. Some of the chalk used in schools was just such mud before it was raised to form rock layers on the dry land. Mountains in the Oceans.--While most of the bottom of the sea is a plain, some parts are not so level. Here and there are mountain peaks, and chains of islands, extending above the sea far away from the continents. Many of these are portions of mountain chains rising above the water, having been lifted to such a height by the wrinkling of the earth s crust through contraction; but many, like the Hawaiian Islands, are volcanoes which have been built up by lava flowing from the interior of the earth (see pp. 124 and 125). Coral Islands.--In the open ocean there is another interesting kind of island known as the coral island (Fig. 118). Some very tiny creatures, called coral polyps, build hard, limy coral, such as you have no doubt seen. Where the ocean water is warm, as in the torrid zone, these little animals live...
