The elongation at the limit of elasticity is then and consequently, The maximum elongation of ordinary mild steel, just before local extension takes place, may roughly be taken to be, i, then: --From the above two expressions $c = 43$ and $cx = 13.8$. The formula for the strain beyond the limit of elasticity is therefore: $--q = 43 yi + 13.8$. The assumption that the strain curve is a common parabola beyond the limit of elasticity may or may not be quite correct, but this part of the curve is not in any case of a very definite character, its form depending largely on the time and other elements. If the exact relation between the strain and stress is known for any particular kind of material, then the above equation can be modified accordingly. For ordinary steel, the values at the principal points of interest, viz., at the limit of elasticity, and at the breaking point, do not vary greatly from those assumed. As before: $--e-8 8- l 3 - = 70 0T + 13.8$. It was seen that, = HH.-, and introducing, as before, d the draught forw and / forj, then $r--70 d IL i 1 Q U$ or $a = 6.9 + f -M. 57b$ By equations n. and m. the stress on the plate can be determined from zero to the breaking limit, assuming that there is no...
