

Word Weavings: Writing Poetry With Young Children

By Shelley Tucker

Good Year Books, 1997. Book Condition: New. Brand New, Unread Copy in Perfect Condition. A+ Customer Service!
Summary: Young children learn how to compose their own poetry using the poetic elements they use in everyday conversation. Rather than trying to force their thoughts and emotions into established patterns, children compose with metaphors, similes, personification, and the other poetic elements that come naturally to them. The book includes writing suggestions and exercises, art activities to extend and enhance poetic expression, and many sample poems written by students and children. Illustrations.
