Yet upon this particular subject he had most decided opinions, and expressed himself with great force. We were talking about education as a means of alleviating distressing social conditions. And yet, said he, education doesn t always help. Take the case of the Negro - when did education ever do a Negro any good? Why, do you know three fourths of the Negroes in our prisons are educated. How much education do you suppose they have? I asked. They can read and write, he answered, that is about as far as the Negro can go in education. Whatever else he acquires is purely through the faculty of imitation, and the pity of it is that he always imitates what is worst. It happened that I had recently visited the schools and some of the homes of the Negroes in that city (they were graduates of Atlanta University) and so I asked him if he had done the same. No, I have not, he answered, and then challenged me again, but when did you ever see an education do a Negro any good? This man was doubtless expressing his honest conviction with reference to the education of the Negroes, and I have related...
