Excerpt: . . . very little in the way of receipts, it will be seen that it adds materially to the expenses of the Department. This increase in expenses was met by the voluntary action of the students in suggesting to the faculty an increase of twenty-five dollars per annum in tuition fee. This went into effect last year, and just about proved sufficient to meet the additional expenditure caused by the hospital. It is gratifying to note that this increase in fees, although adopted so suddenly, did not seem to reduce materially the number of students. In addition to the college hospital the students carried on their work as usual at the City Hospital and in the free dispensary. In this latter institution between four and five thousand patients were treated. Reports from the Dean and also from the Secretary and Manager of the Dental Department show a most satisfactory years work. The attendance is slightly below that of one year ago, probably by reason of the increase in fees. A marked improvement in the instruction of the department was made the present year by a more careful grading of courses. The classes are now almost entirely separated, and the result has been a decided improvement in the work. In the Law Department the record has surpassed even the record-breaking year reported in June, 1907. The attendance has been seventy-seven against seventy-four the year previous. This large increase in enrollment seems now to be permanent. It is...
